Admission Policy of Graduate School of Agriculture

Today, we are faced with numerous challenges on both the domestic and international levels. Global challenges include securing sustainable energy, resources and food, and addressing the global environmental deterioration symbolized by abnormal and extreme weather. Within Japan, we face urban environmental issues, food loss, and the extension of healthy life expectancy. The academic field of agriculture can contribute extensively to solve these problems. Educational research in the agricultural sector is also expected to play a key role in achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) set by the United Nations. Graduate schools are also expected to play a central role in fostering "intellectual professionals" in current social reform (from the "Fourth Guidelines on Measures to Promote Graduate School Education"). Accordingly, the philosophy of education and research in the Graduate School of Agriculture is to develop human resources with a high level of understanding and deep insights into agriculture-related fields to realize the sustainable society necessary in Japan and overseas.

To realize this philosophy, the Graduate School of Agriculture seeks students with the following qualities, abilities, and motivations.

1. Those with a deep interest and understanding of agriculture.
2. Those with logical thinking abilities and an independent, inquiring spirit.
3. Those with sufficient basic skills in their major academic field of study and proficiency in English.
